The goal of the Energy and Climate Partnership of the Americas is to promote clean energy, low carbon development, and climate-resilient growth.

At the Summit of the Americas in April 2009, U.S. President Obama launched the Energy and Climate Partnership of the Americas (ECPA). ECPA is a regional forum for sharing ideas and devising solutions to achieve shared energy and climate goals throughout the Americas focused on renewable energy, energy efficiency, cleaner fossil fuels, energy poverty, infrastructure, sustainable landscapes and adaptation.
